

Testing results of different BFT-Smart configurations

Data of the tests is in the `latency_test_data.xlsx` file on GitHub repository, every test was run 50 times, and the result is the average. The tests were made with 4 replicas in a localhost environment, and the time was measured before and after the invokeOrdered method on the replica that received the client request.

Latency of replies using different configurations in milliseconds

